We all get excited about finding new artists to listen to. Especially the ones you don’t expect to find and end up listening to on repeat. If that is you, then we have some-one new for you to add to your playlist.

Just a week ago today the self produced artist Josie Cotton released her new album 'Day of the Gun' which was recorded and mixed by Kitten Robot Records, the artist's own Label. The record features 12 songs with the album's title track on #3 'Day of the Gun'.

We gave the whole album a listen, well we played it through several times because we liked it so much. Josie Cotton is the perfect artist to listen to for everyone who likes to feel nostalgic when listening to music. Songs that awaken old memories and put you back in time. It would also bring the perfect mood for a long road trip or when getting ready for girls night, jamming in front of the mirror and putting on your make-up.

Just like in the title song 'Day of the Gun' where she sings “Bad luck with men, more than a few”, many other of her songs follow the theme of singing about men, the heartache they can cause, women falling in love with the wrong one and other trouble life can cause, all wrapped up in a new wave, rockabilly style of music.

If you're ready to day dream about old or new lovers to come or are just a big fan of western or spy movies, we highly suggest you give 'Day of the Gun' a spin! Her influence of these type of movies are perfectly reflected in her songs. Grab your favorite cocktail, sit back and start feeling like you’re listening to the soundtrack of the next James Bond movie!
