New Wave icon Josie Cotton shares punchy visuals for “Day Of The Gun,” the title track of her new album that comes alive with bold vocals that swoop over sharp guitars.

Hunted by ‘do gooder’ priests, motorcycle bullies, loser boyfriends and a whole Martial Arts school of wannabe Bruce Lees, the B-movie-style video homage is a hypnotic and wild trip that evoke the best of Tarantino and all manner of cult film.

A high-spirited anthem and video which unveils a powerful and alluring tale, we follow Josie “the Fang” Cotton and her two sister soldiers who roam the highways seeking only justice with their beehives, bad attitudes and knives.

The final and third of a trilogy of her videos which includes “Painting In Blood,” and “Disco Ball,” showcasing Cotton’s epic musical presence and her unbridled love for the macabre that shines throughout the album.
